

Some Thoughts on Jupiter Conjunct Pluto

From Gloria Star

April 3, 2020

As Jupiter joins with Pluto, it's impossible to ignore the intense challenge we're all facing. Since the quest for survival is a basic human instinct, it's no surprise that we are all feeling especially vulnerable. It's not the first time in human history that we've experienced a pandemic, and certainly will not be the last. But the conundrum itself has become rather daunting.

Jupiter is exactly conjunct Pluto on Saturday, April 4th, at 10:45 PM EDT. There's a very real promise in this joining of powers. Jupiter brings amplification to the fact that we have some very real problems that we've attempted to shove beneath the surface, disguise, ignore, or cover up. But now, with the help of the Greater Benefic energy of Jupiter, it's like a huge panoramic projection against the screen of life on planet Earth. "Can you see it now?" asks Jupiter. "No? Well, I can make it larger."

It's important to grasp the issues now, since this is, after all, a teaching/learning moment. It's our chance to learn more about the vulnerabilities of human life, of the life of Earth herself, while we also find ways to better understand and utilize our greatest strengths. In the scheme of things, We ... humanity, that is... are the patients. We are also the healers. In fact, it is the role of Healer that we are all trusting to get us through this daunting trial. We've learned, too, that the healers can be wounded. In fact, if this is the mantle you've taken on, there's a good chance you will not walk away unscathed. We thank you, and offer an eternally grateful heart. For those of us not on the front lines, supporting these brave souls who are giving their all to their great work is the least we can do. Taking away, hiding or misusing the resources they require to do their work is, simply, not okay.

And who would have thought the panic would have triggered a run on toilet tissue? Hand sanitizer ... I get that. But then, there's the greed factor - and that part is further triggered by the nature of Jupiter. Saturn and Pluto were joined in Capricorn when this thing started earlier this year, a process that involved the potential for misuse of power. As you know, Saturn has now stepped into the zone of Aquarius. But Pluto remains in its position in Capricorn for a few years. Right now, the faster-moving Jupiter has essentially landed on Pluto. Whatever the manifestations of Pluto in this degree of Capricorn, Jupiter's connection makes them larger, heavier, more profound, more transformative. The end result of this cycle is a complete transformation of life as we know it.

Or is that, life as we knew it?

The path we've been following is now under construction. This might be what you would call the demolition phase. But it can be less injurious if we work together toward a common purpose. Heaven knows we've needed to alter our course and become more unified. The problem with unifying is that there's often a need to find a consensus, or to give up a little power for the hope of what we call the common good. What we learn now can also save us when future pandemics arise. And we know they will.

For the next four days, planetary cycles provide the cosmic ingredients necessary to reach into our common hopes and dreams ... and also make way for your individual connection to the "All that is" to shine light on the path that opens for you, too. What are we each learning about life, about those who share the circle of our lives, and about ourselves? When you think about the qualities of Capricorn, there are a few standouts that could be helpful now: keep it simple, be practical, and do the work! Wisdom from lessons learned will be foundations of the solutions we seek.

Consider making time over the next four days to become part of a huge global meditation to bring healing to the earth and to humanity. Many are marking the time of Jupiter conjunct Pluto on April 4th at 10:45 PM EDT to join in a global meditation. But you can start now.

You know, I've attempted to live my life as my personal meditation, with each step, breath and thought creating a connection to the Universe that fuels the fire in my heart to be fully alive and present. Some days I'm better at surrendering to my Higher Self than I am on other days. I know, however, that this is the time to breathe more deeply. To feel the vibrant light of life igniting the power that ties each of us to the Source of life.

Breath is the key. What needs to be released in your life that will allow you to breathe more freely? Find thoughts, feelings or attitudes that feed negativity and fear, blocking your path forward. Now is the time to remove such forces from your life. Let compassion fill your heart. Invite love to illuminate your path ... forward.

Be Well.
