

Starlight Message From Gloria Star

Reshaping the Revolution
Early Spring 2021

The confinements required of humanity for the past year have been extremely challenging to our fundamental sense of reality. How many times have you said, “I just don’t recognize my life” during the pandemic experience? It’s difficult, of course, to see ourselves and the manifestation of our hopes and dreams when limited to the “rules” of shutdown, when everyone is masked and standing six feet apart, and when every facet of our lives seems to be caught up in a kind of insanity. Even identifying Truth has become convoluted, and qualities like trust are continually questioned. You may even wonder if you can trust yourself. Yet we see that adaptation is possible when priorities dictate such restraints.

Welcome to the conundrum of our time, and the challenges of survival in a newly emerging world order. The power of the cosmic changes as seen through the symbols of the recent planetary alignment of Jupiter, Saturn and Pluto traveling together in Capricorn during 2020, manifested as huge changes in life as we know it. These were the primary energies involved in bringing issues, dysfunctions, and old abuses to the surface. Especially notable, the “fear factor” expanded to extreme proportions. Pathways to progress were blocked, and the adversarial battle between light and dark intensified. “Getting through” has become a mantra, and we’re seeking the path that will free us from the restraints that currently define our lives.

Many of you have asked how long this circumstance will last, and the best I can determine, we are definitely at a turning point ... or, perhaps, a fork in the road. When Jupiter and Saturn joined forces in Aquarius on December 20th 2020, there was, indeed, a brilliant gateway to the future opening. We may be in the doorway, but it is not an easy ingress into this pathway moving us into the Aquarian Age. It’s not like a light switch you turn on, as much as it is about opening our eyes to see where we are and where we might actually go!

Here's a clue: Saturn – the planet signifying structure, security, reality, clarity, testing and responsibility – has now moved into a high-tension square with Uranus. Doesn't sound like fun, since Uranus is all about change, breakthrough, revolution, freedom and innovation. This square connection first manifested on February 17th, and will reappear two more times in 2021 – June 14th, and December 24th. The feeling of this uncomfortable pair is all about how to change without self-destructing. Saturn in Aquarius sternly implores us: “Use what you have learned to move ahead.” Uranus in Taurus is all about revolutionary changes to our value systems, asking, “What do you really want? What or whom do you truly love?” And, let's not forget ... “How much will it cost?” After all, the seven years of Uranus in Taurus bring us in touch with the values that form the fundamental priorities in our lives.

Another influence from Saturn in Aquarius helps us get in touch with our commonality – what we have in common. This same cycle can spur potentially excessive judgment about the things that form the primary infrastructures of our lives – like government, institutions, and societal rules. We can see how our interconnections are operating. “In this together” is likely to continue as a viable mantra through the next two years, while Saturn travels through Aquarius.

I begin this Starlight Message with a short tutorial, since there's no escaping the tests we face. The outcomes may not be ideal, since there's also a strong tendency to hold steadfastly to the past, and block the promise of positive changes. This cycle is all about the waiting game, employing patience, and often slowing down to assure the best outcome when instigating change. There can certainly be a resistance to change, and one way to deal with that is to find shared values that allow real progress and healing to take place.

We all may feel “ready to get back to our lives” ... but here's the kicker: Back is not necessarily the operative direction. The experience of Covid-19 has wrecked our lives, and we need to rebuild while incorporating some measurable changes. We've seen our vulnerabilities, and in the experience of healing and restructuring, it's important to employ what we've learned. If not, then the Saturn challenge will operate more like stumbling blocks. We have choice. We can integrate what we've learned with the possibilities of incorporating fresh changes or we can experience very real set-backs in our progress.

Each time the Saturn-Uranus square peaks during 2021, expect to see adjustments due to what is lacking, not available, or not working as expected. We're still under the influence of the first of these periods that peaked mid-February. By the time Spring arrives, the tensions between Saturn and Uranus are easing somewhat, but you'll see them operating in the world around us. Stubborn attitudes can be a problem, no matter their origin. Perhaps awareness of a little "cause and effect" could be helpful?

Now...What about the details?

Seeking inspiration and spiritual support, we experience a powerful, but brief, cycle when the Sun joins Neptune on March 10th, operating like a vivid dream about our ideals and hopes. Just a few days before the New Moon in Pisces on March 13th (5:21 AM EST), this can be an excellent period to escape the ordinary, enjoy creative and artistic activities, or just take a break from the routine. It's notable that in the USA, Daylight Saving Time begins on March 14th at 2:00 AM (in whatever time zone). It's the day we lose an hour, and when a lot of people show up late.

The Pisces New Moon marks a time to energize your imagination, exercise your spirituality, and connect more fully with your Inner Self. The Moon itself connects to Venus and Neptune in Pisces, ushering in qualities of love and compassion. It's an excellent few days to reflect and tune in to your inner self, or to reach out to make a difference in the world. Empathy runs strong from March 10th - 15th. It can be wonderful fuel for strengthening hope and fortifying true faith in your aspirations.

Spring arrives on March 20th at 5:37 AM EDT. The Vernal Equinox marks the time when the Sun's rays shine their light through the lens of and Night are equal as this new Solar Festival to bring forth balance and harmony. It's a time for when courage can grow stronger. During the next to the power of enthusiasm, independence and celebration fueling the energy of this period of new life. Seeds that months ago, sprout and grow. Mercury and Uranus form a happy alliance from March 19th- 23rd, sparking new ideas and a shift in perspective, and can lead to a different way of communicating and connecting with one another. It's a time for action, assisted by the power of Mars supported by Saturn – a great indicator that we may all feel that we’re getting something done, making progress, or simply ready to make a move. Also, because the Sun unites with Venus at the Spring Equinox this year, love can be the overriding power source, helping to quell some of the negativity unleashed during the Saturn–Uranus Square in February. Let Love be the guiding light and inspiring force behind thoughts and actions now.

As the Moon waxes, its cycle peaks when the Full Moon in Libra occurs on March 28th, featuring a period of spiritual strength seen through the unity between communicative Mercury and imaginative Neptune. Becoming clear about preferences and priorities is aided by an easy flow between Venus and Saturn, when integrating well-established values are supported. It’s time to complete projects and make way for what is yet to come. It’s also time to get in touch with how you truly feel about your relationships, when harmony can be challenging, but important.

These energies seem perfectly timed with the themes of Passover and Easter, marking a period of introspection, reflection, and forgiveness. Continuing from March 27th – April 5th, these brief cycles add just the spark for integrating fresh changes into time-worn traditions. There’s an uneasy conflict between Mars and Neptune peaking from April 6th–10th that can result in confusion, and may also bring deceit and dishonesty into the picture. Be wary of business deals that contain unanswered questions or leave you wondering what’s missing.

Once the New Moon in Aries occurs on April 11th, the picture shifts dramatically. Old issues or buried wounds can be brought to the surface as the healing process gains momentum. Yet there can be issues with honesty and clarity, when confusion and deception are activated while action-packed Mars runs into Neptune’s fog bank from April 7th – to 11th. Value differences may be the culprit when old rivalries or unresolved conflicts are likely from April 8th–13th, while Venus is undermined by Pluto’s challenge to incorporate the effects of transformation. This can be particularly notable in contract negotiations, finances, and also in matters of the heart.

Mid-month during April, leadership is challenged by the emergence of unfinished business from the past. Those societal hot buttons will be easily activated, and so before you join the chorus demanding some type of revolution, make sure you understand what is truly at the core. That old adage about glass houses and throwing stones may play out in a dramatic way. However, from April 17th–19th, trouble-makers are likely to take action, but may not necessarily succeed in destructive or disruptive ventures.

While you may not think of Taurus when you consider revolution, it's that very zodiac influence taking center stage. When the Sun shifts into Taurus on April 19th (4:33 PM EDT), environmental issues take the lead – just in time for Earth Day (April 22nd). The revolutionary energy represented by Uranus continues its cycle through steady Taurus. In unison with Venus' value-driven energy, Uranus gets a little help from friends, lovers, and a chorus of those ready to share their artistry and resources. New directions emerge in personal relationships and may involve others who seem to be in and out before you can count to ten. Yet, sometimes a powerful spark of interest in mutuality can ignite plenty of passion! Watch for a new Starlight Message before the end of April!

To update you on the changes continuing in my life, I am settling into our home here in the Pacific Northwest. My spinal injury is healing, and that's making a huge difference. By the way, I highly recommend acupuncture as therapy for spinal issues! My husband, Richard, and I are well, and continue reorganizing our lives and priorities. There's a lot to do in a cross-continent move.

I am still happy to share that I continue work with clients – telephone only, since the social distance seems a sensible choice. Like you, I look forward to the time when we can connect more personally. If you're ready for a phone consultation, just get in touch and we'll find a time for your session. Waiting time is generally about 3–4 weeks. Do keep in mind that I am also available to help you determine the best times for taking action, such as the sale or purchase of property, or for elective surgical procedures. I can generally complete such research within a week to 10 days of your request.

Meanwhile, may you find bright blessings welcoming you along your life journey.

Peace and light,
Gloria
